1. The central hospital serving the town of Teplice (N 50-38, E 13-50) and the surrounding villages occupies the premises at Duchcova ulice 53 which housed the municipal hospital of Teplice prior to World War II. The hospital equipment, installations, machines, instruments, etc., also date back to prewar years, with the exception of a negligible amount of medical equipment acquired after the erection of a new two-story building in 1949-50 which serves as the children's ward. Plans have been prepared for the enlargement of the hospital; additional buildings are to be erected in 1955 on an empty plot on the opposite side of Bratislava ulice. 25X1
2. The hospital can accommodate a maximum of 1,200 patients. The normal capacity is around 1,000 beds, but this is usually exceeded by from one to two hundred, especially during epidemics. The permanent hospital staff consists of approximately 100 physicians, 100 nurses, 30 to 40 administrative employees, and a large number of auxiliary workers. About 30 young physicians, recent graduates, have been attached to the hospital in 1954.
3. The hospital has departments for internal diseases, surgery, orthopedy, gynecology, diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat, skin and venereal diseases, infectious diseases, a children's ward, a maternity ward, and an X-ray department. The infectious disease ward has approximately 100 beds and is always overcrowded, especially with polio cases. Tuberculosis patients are treated in the out-patient clinic; cases needing hospitalization are taken to the tuberculosis hospital at Bukov, near Usti nad Labem. Children afflicted with jaundice are hospitalized at Most (N 50-32, E 13-39), while adults so afflicted are sent to the hospital at Usti nad Labem.
4. There are therapeutic baths for rheumatism, polio, etc., at Teplice with permanent accommodations for 100 to 150 children afflicted with polio and for other patients. A separate building of the bathing establishment is reserved for army officers and is also much frequented by Soviet, Bulgarian, and other Satellite officers.
